Historical perspectives on Globalization and Capitalism

Mario Perugini

Contents

One legacy of the present globalization is the fragmentation of the notion of "capitalism" into several national and supra-national models. Since 1945, different models of capitalism evolved in different areas of the World, and different models of enterprise and entrepreneurship emerged as well.

The course merges the economic history approach with the insights offered by the economics of organization and the relational theories of the firm in order to solve the problem to understand cross-national variation in the political economy. The focus is on the role of history and culture in shaping the institutions that superintend to the different spheres of the political economy, including labour markets, markets for corporate finance, the system of skill formation, and inter-firm collaboration on research and development that reinforce national equilibria and give rise to comparative institutional advantages.
